Fillbuster Dauntless Back.

Jacksonville Suspects that She Led and led the Silver Heels Expedition in Cuba.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 13.—The famous tug Dauntless is back in port after an absence of several months. When she left Jacksonville she went quietly to towing vessels, but when the press announced that the schooner Silver Heels had left New York with a cargo of munitions of war for Cuba she started out in search of "wreckers."

I shall make every possible arrangement for the enjoyment of the good people of Wilmington.

has been given justice. It will be remembered that Paul Davis was accused of assaulting a white girl, the whose father he worked in the above named county, but the facts developed in which the girl was tried and acquitted a few days ago, for shooting the colored boy, at the very door of Court House; while it is true that a few days before the colored boy was tried for assault and sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary. The trial of the white man was such a flagrant travesty of justice, that when the counsel for the colored boy made application for a new trial and the court granted the same the Commonwealth's attorney entered a plea of nolo contendere.

ally of Criminal Intimacy with J. and Smith was used as prosecuting witness. When the case came up for trial, Smith turned State's evidence, throwing the weight of the case on Cannon and his associates.

Masters The Hon. J. H. Smith, Jr. presiding. Messrs. J. H. Smith, Jr. and J. H. Smith, Jr. were present.

The engines of the train were damaged and several cars were destroyed.

Annual Conference of the A. M. E. Church.

Mr. Editor, please allow me to thank you for your valuable paper to the members and friends of the A. M. E. Church, that Sunday. It is a day not spent especially for a Grand Rally. I appeal to the generous people to go with all the members of the city of Wilmington to our rendezvous on the above named day. I have advised the presence of several ministers, who have kindly consented to spend the day.

It is indeed a hard time we are having, but the good times are just around the corner.

Application for Receiver Refused.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 13.—Application for a receiver in the Southern Home Building and Loan Association, one of three of the stockholders, was refused by the United States Judge, Herdson, this afternoon.

Disolution of Firm.

The firm of Bell and Pickens, Fish and Oyster dealers, is dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. H. B. Pickens having bought out the interest of Mr. Salem Bell, and will continue the business of wholesale dealer in fish and oysters. Mr. Bell is now engaged in the business of retail dealer in fish and oysters.

Paul Davis Free.

Paul Davis is again a free man. For once a Negro in Henrico county

You send your boy that his or her moral may be improved, and yet you get drunk, go home to your wife and children and use profane language. Is there any wonder that education does not improve a large number of our people?

A Dastardly Conspiracy.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13.—For past few months, much interest has been manifested in the case of J. P. Cannon, E. Guy Hall and W. Smith, all white, of Norfolk, charged with conspiracy to defraud non's wife for the purpose of suing a divorce on Cannon. The circumstances upon which Cannon and his associates were tried for conspiracy to defraud, was such a flagrant travesty of justice, that when the counsel for the colored boy made application for a new trial and the court granted the same the Commonwealth's attorney entered a plea of nolo contendere.

PASSING OF THE MUSTA

Wild Horses Are No Longer of a Value.

The wild horse of Texas has been one of the greatest nuisances with the border of the Lone Star State. No satisfied with its own freedom the wild horse has adopted the tactics of Apache and of the Sioux and sta-pedes its brethren. Novelists have taught us to believe that the wild mustang is emblematic of freedom pure and noble. The Texas ranchman regards him as an emissary of the evil one, for he brings to his patch despair and loss.

For the last decade the droves of horses that run in Texas have been steadily increasing in number and strength. Years ago it was worth while to catch these animals to sell.
Nowadays it is hard work to sell a mustang for up even as a cart pony.
Formerly it was the case that there was no horse for the stockman, the cattle-grower, like the Texas pony which had run wild for the first four, or five years of its life. Lean and slim as an Arab with the endurance of an Indian and a capacity for steady speed that can only be likened to a locomotive he was a treasure. Well seasoned, a cow pony could be ridden 200 miles in a single day and come out of the encounter with fatigue with dying colors.

The wild horse, however—that same animal which the 10-cent novelist describes as the "fiery untamed steed"— believes the sweetest of freedom are so very sweet that all his brethren in bondage should share them. With this in mind therefore he sways down upon the inclosure of the ranchman, induces the cow ponies to brave the terrors of jumping a barbed wire fence and takes chances on clearing the sides of the corral. The result is that the stockman, unless one of the filters stops on guard, is likely to wake up in the morning and find his herd stampeded.

If it is the round-up the first thing the wranglers know a thunder of hoofs comes from the prairie, a shrill neighing, which the herd answers in equally shrill notes. The hoof-beats sound nearer and nearer, the herd grows more and more excited and uneasy, until finally the wild mustangs dash in and mingle with the cow ponies and in a moment more all are off for some place where the herder knows where. The wranglers
herder

A "stereoptico-musical aggregation" from San Antonio visited a neighboring Texas town. To entertain the inhabitants they impressed an old grand piano which had lain long unused in the public hall. The "professor" opened the lids and found that the keys responded pleasantly to his touch. He launched into Wagnerian melody, and the pianissimo prelude gently awakened a colony of wasps that had built a nest in a recess of the instrument during the months of its idleness. The pianist plunged into fortissimo and was startled to find the rumble and roar of his basso-profondo notes accompanied by a strange, high, angry hum. In another second, with a vicious whir of wings, the yellowjackets were out and upon professor, "aggregation," and audience. There was a howling stampede for windows and doors; and in current history it is written that the San Antonio train, which was flagged at the crossing that night, carried away a little band of men who looked as if they had had an unpleasant encounter with a threshing-machine.
